Easter Blessings

Remembering Easter Traditions

Social Service Assistant, Joanna Hall says they always had an Easter Egg hunt before church and then came home to baked ham and sweet potatoes for Easter Dinner

Resident Ketra Burton states that they always had an Easter Egg Hunt and then a very rich, delicious pineapple layer dessert found in the Klaus Cookbook

Nurse Joyce Erickson remembers that she would have white gloves, and a hat and purse for Easter Church

Carole Kellenberger from Administration states that when she was little her Grandma would make her a new dress and sometimes she would get a white hat and gloves to go with it.

Resident Helen Boswell says, "Dad would take me to the Easter Egg hunt hosted the legion post and I always looked forward to that!"

Resident Eleanor Baer says that they had Easter baskets filled with candy eggs, chocolate bunnies and jelly beans for the kids

Sandra Morrow from Housekeeping told how as a child growing up in Scotland, they would die hard boiled eggs and roll them down a hill and chase them until the eggs broke open. This was done to signify the stone being rolled away from the empty tomb. Later they would open the eggs and feed the yolks to the lambs.

Resident Alice Jacobson (left) says that her grandmother used to tell her that on Easter she had to wear all new clothes. They also always had a family dinner together on Easter.

Resident Lu Ann Knapp tells us that her mother would hide Easter Eggs and then get the children up on Easter morning to hunt for them.

Resident Viola Kings tells how a friend from church would bring her son bunches of Easter Eggs dyed with onion peels

Resident Norma Ahrens shared how her Grandma Baker would dye Easter Eggs in onion water

CNA Emily Endress says that her mom would hide their Easter baskets around the house for them to find.

Melanie Huette from the Dietary Department remembers that her mom (Donna Wettstein) always made an Easter Bunny cake when they lived on the farm

Allen Schrock and his wife, say that Easter Traditions in their home centered around family with their kids and grandkids. They read the Easter Story from the Bible and then would put nickels and dimes and pennies in eggs for the kids to hunt and as the kids got older they put quarters in the eggs. Now they play Easter Bingo with Allen as the caller and they have a special snack prize table for the kids to gather prizes from.

Lisa Lepretre from Housekeeping says Easter traditions for her family were church and egg hunting for the kids.

Mark Moser from Maintenance says that his family would go to Grandma's house and their aunt would hide chocolate Easter Bunnies
